Renaissance Theatre Authority To Speak On Troubadours' Play

Mr. Charlie Raisen, whom Troubadour director Lee Kahn calls "a tank of a character" as there is in this country" on the Italian Renaissance on the Renaissance company dinner theatre, will speak at W&L Monday night in connection with the forthcoming Troubadour production of The Three Musketeers.

The company was one of the chief sponsors of the modern theatre. It is little known today, since it was the one major theatre form which was never performed on from an actual script; all plays were improvised from a base line of outlines and stock of comic situations and characters.

The Three Musketeers is a reconstruction of a scene from the surviving archives of what the final result must have been like. It concerns the activities of the three Musketeers of the court of Louis XIII in France, played by this production with Fay Compton.

Archibald mints the three old friends of the title (Louis Davis, Kevin Yankovich, and Bill Headley) in caricature on flashy with another's script, and Charles Longstaff, (Mrs. Robert Raising, Mrs. Bayster Lyde, and Mrs. John Brown).

In addition, he looks up to the west, peruses another to have lived all his years, and convinces his wife to bear a child very much like in the musketeers, playing the lead role.

Lowe, walking off the platform, cited the need for exposure to all campaigns, when it was her intention to achieve a truly liberal education.

Student Involvement

The third area in which our attention is directed to is that of student involvement in the affairs of the student government itself. The attention given to this area of study allows us to see the full potential of the EC, New and old. Although the EC has not enough officers to be described as a very successful group, they are making good headway.

I, real and regret that the lack of opposition for the top seats was a prime cause of this success. What disturbs me more is the lack of interest shown in these third and fourth positions of interest. In a Forum discussion on the NSA question and in the open student meetings on the self-study reports, I keep, through increased and more effective use of the OOKD, Forum, and through increased freshman orientation in the functions of the student union, to urge a great deal of encouragement for this area.
